Quotes for Today

Feeling grateful or appreciative of someone or something in your life actually attracts more of the things that you appreciate and value into your life.

- Northrup Christiane

The only way of finding the limits of the possible is by going beyond them into the impossible. - Arthur C. Clarke

From the Pastor

Remember?

Remember where you were that Tuesday morning when you heard about airliners crashing into the World Trade Center towers, the Pentagon, and a field in Pennsylvania? Of course you do. -- I was only ten years old in 1963, but vividly remember where I was when I heard that President Kennedy had been shot. Older folks recall the moment they heard reports about the attack on Pearl Harbor. – Big events make big impressions, and we never forget.

The tenth anniversary of what everyone refers to as 9/11 happens to fall on this Sunday. We will pause to remember those who lost their lives in the horrifying events of that day, and those who have lost their lives in a continuing war on terror. Collective insanity comes in many forms in this world. Some of it is blatant and obvious; some of it is subtle and unrecognized. Humans are capable of angelic caring, but also quite able to be beastly brutal. (See Syria, Sudan, and Somali in 2011... but the list is much, much longer.) Weird beings we are... in many ways.

This week, you are getting multiple reminders of 9/11, so, of course, you won't forget. Each Sunday, and whenever God's people get together, we are reminded that the bottom-line reality of the Universe is characterized by kindness, love, gentleness, sharing, selflessness, and virtue. We remember that all these traits were perfectly exemplified in the very human life of Jesus of Nazareth. And we are reminded that the Master of the Universe expects us to be just like Him, too. – That sounds WAY too important to forget.

Yours in Him,
Lee
